

How to be of service going forward

Good day to all reading this. Let us address some things.

Questions :

What are my next steps?

How can I help the world when my personal life is in disarray?

What is the point? I'm doing the work now and nothing is changing.

Why should I go further?

Is this all even real because I'm getting no results and starting to feel like I've been a fool to think if prayed hard enough my life and the world would get better?

Im doing my part, I'm feeling good about it but when will the world catch up. When will I see a big change I can be proud to have been a part of?

Can you give me a sign I am on the right path and the work I'm doing is making a difference?

Does that sum up many of you right now? We hear you, I will say that again, we hear you. Your prayers are questions...and complaints...are heard, each and every one of them.

Lets talk about those questions although my relatives you already do know the answers don't you? You know even as you ask what the answers are because you are still communicating with us. You are still asking. So first let me say yes continue, yes you are making a difference and yes bigger changes are coming.

You see my relations what is happening now is a slow undercurrent of change. The change now is subtle but strong.

There will be no dramatic standings as before where you can all see the one scenario high-water mark where there was change. There is no need for you to all gather at a wall as it comes down, no need to gather screaming at building, holding your signs while those inside appear to not be able to hear or read.

This movement my relatives, this movement is the movement of the light. Light doesn't need to scream 'I am here' it simply is here. It doesn't fight with another light to be brighter, it joins with the light beside it to make an even brighter light. The light simply is and helps guides the way without making boisterous claims about how it is the light. The light never asks if it's making a difference in the dark, it doesn't even consider the dark, it just shines like light does.

Do you see what I am getting at? You are the light and that is all you need to be. The light does not require accolades or acknowledgement from others to continue, it continues because it has always been, sometimes it just needs to be turned on.

Your next steps my relations are to continue on your spiritual path.

You will have moments of darkness and frustration, that is your duality. Work through those moments and daily do something to bring the light in for your self and another person.

Humans often think to do good a need must be stated, someone fulfills it either by action or teachings and they see the immediate results. Immediate human gratification if you will. Those are not the actions I am speaking about. The action of bringing the light to someone who is experiencing darkness could be as simple as smiling at them, letting them drive their car in a spot in front of you when you are in a traffic jam, getting from your seated position to hold the door open for another person when their hands are full.

You see those small actions will remind others that there is good in humanity. There is often a very little 'thank you' if any but remember your requiring acknowledgement for your actions is your ego. Not a necessity.

The best cure for your own discord in life is to help another. Help another person in what ever means you can. Whether it be financially, spiritually, emotionally or simple by being there. So while you may feel like certain parts of your life is in disarray that doesn't mean you should take the route of giving up and throwing your hands up and saying I can't. For when you help another help will also come your way.

Why should you continue on this path of spiritual awareness and helping? Well the purpose is bigger than you. You must work together to continue to spread the light. There is rewards when your society as a whole 'lightens'.

You see my relations the answers you are looking for, the cures for your diseases are already there. They are in the minds of the people but they are waiting to be awoken. How interesting off a concept is that? It was by design my relations. In order to activate better things for your societies your societies must continue to grown in a positive manner. Your society must active the good in individual so in return they will add to the light of society.

Say there is a young adult walking around your planet right now with the cure for what you call cancer. Let's say that cure is only partially medical as you understand it and partially a whole new concept and idea that will be brought forth. A whole new way to cure what you call cancer using the individuals own healthy cells and healing chambers. There is a person walking your earth right now with the ability to have that knowledge. There is a spot for this knowledge in their brain, all that it needs is to be activated and then the infused knowledge will come through.

Now say that person is currently a 15 year old female and over the next 5 years she see such love in humans that she wants to help a be a part of that positive energy. Say that 15 year old female starts to see such compassion and love towards others she wonders how she too can help society in such a big way that it will fulfill her heart. She enters a medical program because she wants to help humanity as a whole and along her journey in a medical career she is given from spirit this information to bring forth. She will not realize it came from spirit but she will have been lead by spirit to question and test what needs to be questioned and tested. She sees how hard the chemotherapy and radiation is on a human and she asks how can I do something to help eliminate the cancerous cells without going that route.

Now let's say another route is taken by this 15 year old female.

Say she spends the next 5 years seeing nothing but greed and negativity between humans. What if her next 5 years is filled with witnessing such negativity, fear, war and not witnessing kind acts between humans. She didn't experience the love/light in this world to make her want to help humanity. Then she may not even enter the medical field or if she does she follows suite of the energy she sees around her. She may enter into the quickest program that will have the best financial turn around because she didn't develop the love for humanity.

Let me tell you this my relations, that is a scenario you are in right now. That young woman is walking your planet right now and those are the two paths in front of her. I can assure you she is not aware of her potential.

I can also assure you this is not the first time someone on your planet had the potential for bringing a cure forward, for stopping wars and for moving humanity toward the better. It was never activated because their surroundings, the vibrations of the earth were not conducive to this higher level of awareness.

Now my relations is the time for this. You have the ability to cure your diseases, cure your discord and cure your societies. You have raised the vibration of your planet so much in the last years that all these things are now a possibility. The individuals with these answers are on your planet waiting to be infused with the knowledge after witnessing the acts of love and kindness.

You may or may not know that there was a time where earth did not appear to be making the move toward enlightenment and the path out of that was a destruction of your earth. There was an asteroid that was on a direct path with your earth in the late 1980's of your time. That my relations is no longer the case. You as humans bravely made the shift in your planets energy and we knew the possibility was there for you to do so, the probability of this shift wasn't very high but you did it. When the shift was made the asteroid was no longer on path with you as a whole and was transformed into a series of smaller rocks and no longer a 'death rock'. As each rock hit, some didn't hit at all, it did damage only in areas approximately 1km in distance instead of a hit that would devastate your earth as you know it. The larger rock would have damage to your polar ice caps and kicked up so much dust, blocking the sun for a long period of time, in the southern regions that your entire earth would have become irreparable within 20-30 years of the large rock hitting. It wasn't an immediate destruction, a slower form. I am not saying this to evoke fear, I am telling you how far you have come. I am telling you this also so you can move away from the dooms day prophecies that some of you like to follow. I am here to say yes that was a possible outcome of your earth and yes it was a prophecy as it was a possible outcome. You see prophecies are made with the assumption that the world will continue on the same path it is on when the prophecy is given. If the human energy shifts so do the prophecies. When you look to the Indigenous prophecies that included flooding of areas of inhabitation and the ecosystem becoming so bad food was no longer available this was the scenario they were predicting, that exact scenario would have been the results of that massive rock hitting your earth. You see this prophecies would have been validate if you my relations did not raise the energy of this earth. You will go down in spirits records as the generations that saved the planet earth, you will go down as the lessons that spirits to come will refer to before entering into a life again. You have no idea who you are on spirit side but we do. I can relate to you that we look to you in awe and adoration that you were able to shift the energy and therefor shift the history of that planet.

Now knowing what you know that how much easier is it to accept that one smile you offered someone when they looked like they are having a bad day may be that knowledge carrier you are waiting for. Maybe a nice conversation had in the grocery store when you went out of you way to be kind and took the time to converse is all the light someone needed and the positive light the child next to you needed to see.

Wouldn't that be something, if a smile and a helpful hand up from one human to another was just what was needed to turn on the light of someone with knowledge.

You see my relations what I have said before is you do truly need each other. When you work together you are much stronger than when you stand apart.

That is the change you are all apart of right now.

Yes you are on the right path, if you were not I would not be a part of the countless spirits now reaching to countless people on earth right now.

The time is right....are your intentions?